

Motion Sculpture

Year 5

During Art this week, you will be looking at different motion sculptures created by an Artist called Peter Jansen.

The piece of art that we will be looking at is from a series of dynamic sculptures “Human Motions” where he uses shapes of the human body to create energetic spaces.

Let’s have a look at some of his work!

This is a piece Jansen created known as “Runner”. As you can see, this is a repetition of the same image – this is also the image that we will be recreating!

Over to you...

Today, we would like you to research some of Peter Jansen's Human Motion art and record ideas and critiques about the piece

Critique means to review or examine something – this means to find things that you like and how he has created it.

If you research on Google: Peter Jansen Human Motion art – you will images of all of his work.

Here is an example of what we would like to see...

I like how he has brought the image of a dancer to life, it looks as though we can see each movement that he makes!

I think that he has made this look very realistic the way the body parts are animated!

I think he could have made this better by making the picture look as if it was moving!

I didn't like how the hands and legs look so close together – it doesn't look like they are moving at all!

Next up...

- Once you have researched and evaluated some of Jansen's pieces, it is time to create your own! Compare your favourite pieces and choose which one you would like to create.
- Try and draw a human body template and cut it out on A4 paper!

This could be your starting point for when we create our own human motion sculpture!
